Now in my 70th decade, I find that life has taught me to appreciate life's various challenges and also to embrace the gray areas. I have degrees in education with a specialty in Learning Differences. In 1987, I received a Master of Divinity and have been ordained just over 30 years, having served in rural and urban congregations.

I am trained in conflict resolution and family systems. I value coaching as an effective process that can even move a person around psychological/emotional stumbling blocks to identify, set, and achieve important goals and personal change.
